

CLEVER GAME BEING WORKED

La Follette's Magazine Further Discusses The Question Of Stephenson's Election.

GIVES SENIOR SENATOR'S OPINION

Takes Up Matters In Which The Public Is Much Inter- ested In Just At Present.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Feb. 19.—The attacks upon Senator La Follette in Senator Stephenson's paper, the Milwaukee Free Press, and certain widely published statements that the primary law in Wisconsin is being reworked, have drawn a reply from La Follette, who in tomorrow's issue of his magazine makes answer in two editorial columns headed, "Mr. Stephenson's Campaign Contributions," and the other, "Reputing the Primary." In the former, Senator La Follette, for the first time using the first person pronoun, will say, in part:
"When Mr. Stephenson and I served together in congress twenty-five years ago, his sturdy, pioneer character won my personal regard. When the contest came on in Wisconsin a decade later, Mr. Stephenson, then identified with the old political machine, used his money and influence for six years against the reform movement, but that did not affect our personal relations. Later, when he broke with Payne and Spooner and allied himself with the 'progressives,' I believed it was from conviction. He added the cause by his contributions to campaign expenses, and advanced it by establishing a newspaper in support of the principles for which the progressive element in the party was contending. His contributions were, I supposed, freely given and were so accepted and appreciated. They were at no time excessive in comparison with the contributions in time, in money, and in sacrifice of business interests, made by many disinterested men in the long struggle to restore government to the people of Wisconsin."

Speaking of the charge by the Free Press that "Mr. Stephenson, although contributing to Mr. La Follette's presidential campaign, declined the alluring suggestion that he might be a 'maker of presidents' as was Mark Hanna," La Follette declares Stephenson had contributed against his expressed wish, the committee in charge believing it to be proper to give him the same opportunity to contribute as was offered to others. Later, after alluding to Stephenson's promise not to become a candidate for the second term, which he says he believed, declares that the charges of corrupt practices alone prevent Mr. Stephenson from receiving the solid republican vote of the legislature, and that in case the charges are not proven he will receive that vote. Then, in his second editorial, he says on the same subject:
"The issue is not drawn up on primary elections, or direct nomination, but upon corrupt practices. The enforcement of the corrupt practices act is necessary to pure elections. He is no friend of the primary, who passes over charges of the corrupt use of money for the purpose of influencing the primary. Neither is he a friend of representative government who overlooks similar charges with respect to popular elections. The man opposing his present election are defending the primary. Wisconsin stands by and defends the direct nomination of United States senators."
Close friends of La Follette here declare that outside of the money spent on his paper, Stephenson spent a little less than $8,000 on La Follette and his propaganda.

FILES INJUNCTION TO STOP PAYMENTS

Senator Lehr of Appleton Petitions to Stop Pay of Investigating Committee.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Feb. 19.—State Senator J. Elmer Lehr of Appleton said this morning that during the day he would file in the state supreme court a petition for an injunction to restrain the payment of state money for the expenses of the present legislative investigation into the expenditures of the late United States senatorial campaign. Senator Lehr acts as attorney for Adolph Rosenheim of Milwaukee. The essential claim of the petition is that the investigation of the primary election is simply a mess of factional and party politics, not a proper legislative matter, and such as to legally warrant the expenditure of the state's money. The bill appropriating $5,000 for the investigation was published officially yesterday, but already nearly half of the amount available has been spent and another appropriation will be necessary.

WOULD ABOLISH ALL BUT ONE OF LINES

One Telephone System Enough in a Community, Says Assemblyman Cleary in Bill Introduced.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Feb. 19.—An end to the inconvenience and economic waste of having more than one telephone system in a community is proposed by a bill introduced in the Wisconsin legislature by Assemblyman St. J. Cleary of Blanchardville. Two years ago the legislature enacted a law forbidding the building of parallel lines of railroad, on the theory that competition in such public services is useless and wasteful if adequate service and reasonable rates are assured through the action of the state railroad commission. This law has been found to work well and Assemblyman Cleary declares that it should be broadened to include telephone companies, so that there will be only one telephone exchange in a community instead of two or more separate exchanges. The law would also provide that the existing telephone company in a place, having a monopoly, would not get arrogant or extortionate, for it would be subject to the regulation of the railroad commission.

PATRICK AGAIN SEEKS LIBERTY

CLAIMS COMMUTATION OF DEATH PENALTY WAS UNWARRANTED
FAMOUS LAWYER CONVICT

Of New York Was Four Years in Shadow of Electric Chair—Found Guilty of Murder of Millionaire
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Feb. 19.—In his cell at Sing Sing, Lawyer Albert T. Patrick, now serving a commuted sentence of life imprisonment for the murder of William Marsh Rice, is preparing to renew his fight for freedom. Two weeks hence his case will come before the full Appellate Division on a writ of habeas corpus. Patrick himself will appear before the court and argue in support of his contention that the commutation of the death penalty to life imprisonment by the late Governor Higgins was not warranted, in that it was a change to a punishment not provided by statute for the crime for which Patrick was convicted, and that the change was to his disadvantage, in that it was an imposition of a different and greater punishment. Many eminent legal lights do not hesitate to express the opinion that the noted prisoner is in sight of freedom. Patrick's fight for life is the most remarkable of its kind ever made in this country. His fight for freedom promises to be equally notable, and perhaps as successful. No other person was ever confined as long in a death house awaiting execution as was Patrick. For more than four years and a half he lived within the shadow of the electric chair. During that time he was present when numerous other unfortunate were taken from their cells and marched along the condemned cell block separating the execution chamber. Several times Patrick saw the death watch close in upon him. He heard the State authorities as they tested the electric current in the room adjoining the one where his cell was located. His sentence was finally commuted to life imprisonment by Governor Higgins in December, 1905.

NEW COURSES FOR MINING ENGINEERS

Regents Approve Important Addition to Wisconsin College of Engineering.

Madison, Feb. 18.—The regents of the University of Wisconsin approved the new course in mining engineering submitted by the university faculty. The work is to be given as a four-year course leading to the degree of bachelor of science in mining engineering. It includes practical work in mining and geology to be carried on in the mining fields during the summer vacations. Seven courses of mining under the direction of E. C. Holden, professor of mining engineering who took charge of the department this year. Geology, structural engineering, railway, steam, and gas engineering, together with three years' work in geology constitute the other important elements in the course.

New Wing for Engineering Building

Owing to the overcrowded condition of the engineering building due to the great increase in the number of students in the college of engineering, the regents decided to have plans drawn at once for a wing to the engineering building.

The new woman's building now in the course of erection was named by the regents Lathrop Hall in honor of Dr. John H. Lathrop, the first chancellor of the university, who was at the head of the university from 1850 to 1853.

A plant of cooperation between the United States Bureau of Plant Industry and the department of pharmacy of the university was adopted, the purpose of which is to provide for the cultivation of medicinal plants. Provide Professor of Journalism

Dr. W. G. Meyer, chairman of the courses preparatory to journalism, who has had charge of the courses in newspaper writing, was made assistant professor of journalism. A course of four years of practical journalistic work has been provided for next year to include practical work in connection with the Daily Cardinal. Lester D. Hammond was appointed assistant in chemistry. William Shaffrath, '06, instructor in German in the South Division high school of Milwaukee, was made assistant in the department of German.

H. H. Whitebeck of Adelphi college, Trenton, N. J., was appointed associate professor of geography and physiography beginning with the next academic year. The resignation of Dr. D. Hall, instructor in chemistry, was accepted, Dr. Hall having been appointed chemist for the Westinghouse company at Pittsburgh.

To Cooperate with a Plan

The regents approve of a plan presented by the committee of the University Alumni association providing for cooperation between the regents and the alumni association in developing the alumni list. The plan provides for the appointment by the association of a general alumni secretary, who is to be retained by the regents as alumni recorder, compiling alumni and non-graduate catalogues of the university to be issued as in the past by the university authorities. Degrees were conferred by the regents upon the following persons recommended by the faculty: bachelors of art, Mary Reed Whitehead, Portage; William Louis Schrippers, Milwaukee; bachelors of laws, Miles Charles Riley, South Milwaukee; Cecil Willson Wright, Monroe; Carl Nelson Hill, Spring Green.

Change Titles of Colleges

In accordance with the principles of university nomenclature adopted by the Association of American Universities, of which the University of Wisconsin is a member, the title of the college of law was changed to that of "Law School," and the name of the college of medicine was changed to that of "Medical School"; the recommendation of the Association of Universities being that the term "school" be applied to those professional departments requiring for admission at least two years of college work.

STOUGHTON TEAM IS NOT TO PLAY HERE

Cancel Game With Players Who Had No Right to Make Contract.

Janesville high school basketball five will play Deloit academy tonight and will not meet Stoughton, as originally announced. It appears that an ardent Stoughton youth carried on a correspondence with Principal I. C. Buell of the Janesville school, begging him to get a date set for a game between the Stoughton men and Mr. Buell's team. His letters seemed to bear color of authority, and hence Mr. Buell's acceptance, an acceptance which was revoked when a casual circumstance brought to light the fact that the Stoughton team had been forbidden by their school discipline to play any such game.

The denouncement transpired when Principal Buell, according to his custom, mailed Superintendent Banting of Stoughton the vouchership marks of men in his lineup. Mr. Banting immediately made known the situation. The contest with Deloit academy will take place in the Janesville gymnasium.

SAME OLD MUSIC COMEDY RECIPE

"The Girl Question" Is Constructed on Very Familiar Lines—Greeted by Large Audience.

Reminiscence of "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway" and "The District Leader" in its character studies and the thin thread of its plot, and of all the other recent musical-comedies in its dances and jingles and slurs and the methods of its tender-sentimental parlay, is the Hough-Adams-Hough and melange, called "The Girl Question," which was revealed to a large audience at the Myers theatre last evening. The broiler "take-off" on Eddie Foy, the elms was out in the auditorium which are played by electricity from the stage by Jack Fox and Joe Evans, the excellent rendition of a collage song by Russell Lemoon and the male contingent of the chorus, the "Auf Wiedersehen" heart-interest contributions by Carl George in the role of the "Baron Max" and the "Waltz With Me Till I'm Dreamy" song by Nina Collins and the chorus are the features which please best, and the rest is rather commonplace, though mildly interesting.

"Con Ryan" is never as admirable in his role of the lovelace here as "Kidd Burns" because the character is human sympathy, but Paul Nicholson does very well with the part. Nor is "Joe Forester," the waitress, to be compared for a moment with the original of the "So Long Mary" type. In her role, Marguerite De Von, who is entrusted with the delineation of "Edith—the cashier," can dance and sing some and it is hard to explain why her stunts along this line as well as her love scenes with "Con" and "Harold Sears" fall as flat as they do. Maybe it's her make-up that disfigures.

The "broilers" are a sprightly lot and some of them are comely and can sing as well as dance. Good looks are not entirely ruled out from the ranks of the show-girls. Costumes are elaborate and there is plenty of variety, and color, and novelty in the extensive wardrobe. Some of the color combinations, however, are more startling than pleasing. The familiar "The Sweet to Me Kid" musical motif runs all through the score and the song of that title is the one notable "hit" of the piece. The company appears at Madison tonight.

WOMAN WORKING; A BOY CONFEDERATE

Goes Into Stores And Hides Articles Under Her Shawl While Boy Talks to Clerks.

During the past few days a clever game is being worked by a young woman and a boy about town. The woman goes into a store evidently waiting for someone, and while the boy attracts the attention of a clerk slips some article under her shawl or cape and slips out unnoticed. Several stores have been victimized by the pair who appear very guileless.

GATHERING IN LAST OF CROP YET UNSOLD

Tobacco Men Are Busy Picking Up Odds And Ends of the Present Crops.

The work of gathering in the balance of last season's tobacco crop goes pretty steadily on, says the Editor-Reporter. A strong force of buyers is still maintained in the city and the aggregate sales will foot nearly up to those of recent weeks. It is generally conceded that fully 75 per cent of the crop has been lifted and where growers are willing to accept the going figures the balance seems likely to be taken over within a reasonable time. Some of the better crops are bringing very nearly the figures paid for early selections and yet the bulk of the sales continue around seven cents. The following transactions are reported:

W. J. Smart, 20a at 9 1/2¢ and 3 1/2¢. T. F. Condon, 5a at 9 1/2¢. Chris. Blodorn, 25a at 7 1/2¢. Pethers & Jeffries, 20a at 7 1/2¢. Billing Hornumson, 11a at 8 1/2¢. Mrs. O. P. Saunders, 12a at 7 1/2¢. Peter Skarr, 8a at 7 1/2¢. James Goff, 8a at 7 1/2¢. Otto Johnson, 7a at 7 1/2¢. Fred McNelly, 8a at 7 1/2¢. E. E. Turner, 6a at 7 1/2¢. Wm. Onsrud, 8a at 7 1/2¢. Antonio Onsrud, 18a at 6 1/2¢. John Onsrud, 8a at 6 1/2¢. John Wille, 5a at 7 1/2¢.

The demand for all low grades is particularly strong. The sale of the entire holdings of one of the large packers, reaching above a million pounds, has been effected this week. The market for old leaf continues uneventful. We learn, however, of a sale of 1000s of '90 by M. H. Ford, a 500s lot by Linnas & Leary, and 800s by Halverson & Bure. M. H. Ford & Halverson & Bure are Paul manufacturers.

The shipments out of storage reach 830 cases and 28 cars of bundles to all points for the week. Since last report 74 carloads have been received from outside points for handling here.

CONSERVATION OF A WIDE SCOPE

Resource Conference Is Held in Washington.

DRESSED BY ROOSEVELT

President in Urging World Co-Operation Says Ablest Man Will Do Best Where Neighbors Do Well—Mexicans and Canadian Speak.

Washington, Feb. 19.—At the White House yesterday, President Roosevelt, in address before delegates to the National conservation conference, urged co-operation of a world-wide scope. The president's sentiments were reflected in the speeches at the conference.

The president said: "The conference represents one of the steps that have been taken of recent years looking toward a harmonious co-operation between the nations of the earth for the common advancement of all. In international relations, great features of the growth of the century have been the gradual realization of the fact that instead of being normally to the detriment of one nation to see another depressed is normally to the interest of each nation to see the others elevated. Indubitably it is the same with nations as it is with individuals."

"As for the most prosperous man is the man who lives in a prosperous community as a rule the man is prosperous who has prosperous people to deal with who carries on his business with other prosperous people, who has prosperous people around him. A poor city is just the locality where it is hardest for the ablest type of man to do well. The ablest man will leave where his neighbors also do well. It is just so with nations. Commercial relations the trade of a nation is greatest not with the poor and backward nation, but with the rich and progressive nation. Still the trade returns and see where the average the best customers are found; the best customers, the average, are the prosperous nations. When one nation strides forward along the path of civilization, as a rule that progress means the lifting of nations generally."

"The movement that you gentlemen are beginning national co-operation for the conservation of national and international resources, marks another stage in the advance along these lines. Each nation will be left absolutely free, of course, to exercise its own wisdom in dealing with the things that concern it but it will be given the chance to put by the wisdom of other nations; and I know of no nation or individual that cannot profit by the wisdom of others."

Would Conserve the Streams. "In addition, is opportunity will be given to all of us to join together in doing the work that can best be done in union, by all of some of us, as compared with doing each one separately. With nations whose boundaries march along a great extent of land frontier, as with Canada, the United States, and Mexico, there are necessarily large tracts of land in which the welfare of the people depends upon the action not only of that country, but of the neighboring country. This of course is especially true where our streams are concerned."

Speeches were also made by Secretary Wilson, Commissioner Sidney Fisher of Canada, Romulo Escobar of Mexico, Carlos Scheller and Senator Newlands.

Permanent organization of the North American Conservation conference was perfected at the first regular session, with the selection of Clifford Pinchot, a member of the American delegation, as chairman, no other name being presented. He was placed in nomination by Sydney Fisher of the Canadian delegation and was seconded by Romulo Escobar of the Mexican commission.

HITS TOBACCO TRUST IN REPORT TO ROOSEVELT

Commissioner Smith Urges Probe of American Company, Declaring Few Men Control Millions.

Washington, Feb. 19.—Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, in a report on the tobacco industry of the United States, presented to the president last night, throws interesting light on the tobacco trust, which in the magnitude of its business operations, is one of the greatest organizations in America.

The report sets forth the rise of one of the great combinations of the country. In his letter of transmittal, Commissioner Smith says that it "deals with the history, from the standpoint of its organization, of the great tobacco combination. Starting in 1890 as the American Tobacco Company, a manufacturer of cigarettes, with a capital of $25,000,000, the combination has now a net capitalization (excluding inter-company holdings) of $316,248,821. It has absorbed about 250 separate concerns, and now controls substantially four-fifths of the output of each important kind of tobacco manufactured in the United States, with the exception of cigars."

"Its history also presents important features of stock manipulation. The financial transactions centering around the organization of the Consolidated Tobacco Company in 1901 are especially noteworthy. At that time a small body of directors, and stockholders in the combination believed that the profits of the combination could be greatly increased in the immediate future. They organized the Consolidated Tobacco Company and offered its bonds in exchange for the common stock of the American and the Continental, in order thus to secure for themselves most of the increased profits about to accrue."

"The profits accruing to the common stock of the American and the Continental, after its acquisition by the Consolidated, increased greatly; and the small body of men controlling the last-named company—so small, in fact, that six of them held a majority of its stock and thus controlled the entire combination—became entitled to millions of dollars which had not been for the Consolidated transaction, would have gone to the original common-stock holders."

"The conduct of this group of men is a proper subject for criticism, however, because they could foresee much better than outside stockholders the large profits about to accrue. They occupied a fiduciary relation to the outside stockholders, and should have shared with them equally the special knowledge acquired by their position."

The report discusses at length the methods by which the tobacco combination has been developed, including the "bogus independent concerns" of the combination.

Testimony at Gateway Hearing Demonstrates Feeling of Magnates.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—The hearing before Interstate Commerce Commission or Prouty, which ultimately will decide whether or not entry into Portland is to be an open or closed affair, was concluded yesterday and arguments before the commission set for April 7.

At intervals during the testimony of the witnesses the feeling between the Hill and Harriman lines which has been underlying the proceedings was disclosed, sometimes framed in seriousness and at other times veiled in humor. In the event that the commission orders the opening of the gateway at Portland the matter will be carried through the highest courts, according to a prominent official of the Northern Pacific road.

If the clause in the Hepburn law the commission is granted power to order a through rate where good and sufficient reasons exist for such rate.

TARIFF MEET HAS CLOSED

Delegates Pledged to Fight for Reform.

ARE ADDRESSED BY BARRETT

Director of the International Bureau of Republics Says a Change Is Necessary to Get the Trade of Latin Countries.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 19.—Before the tariff convention came to a close yesterday afternoon the delegates expressed the belief that its work will be perpetuated in the form of the permanent tariff commission for which they are fighting.

The convention was small in numbers, but large in enthusiasm. Its delegates represented great commercial, agricultural and civic bodies and many were United States senators, congressmen and national and state officials. James W. Van Cleave, chosen as permanent chairman, had behind him scores of members of the National Association of Manufacturers, and from the platform on the last day, Thad Snow, who declared himself just a plain unattached farmer of Indiana, joined with his predecessors in what had been a remarkable unanimity of expression from various sections, professions and occupations for the establishment by congress of a permanent scientific and non-partisan tariff commission.

None came from Andrew Carnegie, although the Pittsburgh Ironmaster had previously expressed his approval of the purposes of the convention.

Delegates Take Work Pledge.

Before the final stroke of Chairman Van Cleave's gavel, each delegate pledged himself to continue in his home territory the work for which the convention was called.

John Barrett, director of the international bureau of republics, made the principal speech of the day.

Beginning his speech, Mr. Barrett said that if the United States is to develop her trade with the twenty Latin American republics in the western hemisphere most careful considerations should be given to tariff relations.

"In other words," said Mr. Barrett, "if the United States expects these growing, resourceful and ambitious countries to purchase our manufactured products in greater volume, we must in turn give them an opportunity to sell within our limits their natural products in larger quantities."

"To achieve a result of this kind it is necessary that special attention should be paid to all phases of the buying and selling markets by Latin America. If we would gain our share of business which now goes to other sections of the world, but which ought to be ours, we must study the situation in all its bearings, make reasonable concessions, and, if necessary, negotiate reciprocity treaties, and apply the maximum and minimum tariff, as may be demanded."

Give Tariff Methods.

D. A. Tompkins, of Charlotte, N. C., discussed the general subject of reciprocity, analyzing in round figures the cost of running the various departments of the federal government and defining the three principal ways provided by the constitution for raising revenue. Following were the ways he urged:

- "1. By internal revenues on whiskey and tobacco and a few other items and by revenue stamps on documents when necessary."
- "2. By tariffs on imports."
- "3. By direct tax upon the states in proportion to their population."

SHOWS COURT HOW TO STEAL.

Boy Pickpocket Demonstrates His Prowess Before New York Judge.

New York, Feb. 19.—Hugo Kowaltz, a youthful pickpocket, gave a remarkable demonstration in court yesterday afternoon of the manner in which he said he was taught to steal. Assistant District Attorney Derby, who had charge of the case, borrowed a pocket-book from a woman in the court room. He hung it around his arm and asked the Kowaltz boy to demonstrate how he picked pockets. The boy knocked Derby's arm with one hand and with a deft movement, opened the pocket-book with the other. In less than 30 seconds he extracted the contents, which he concealed under his coat. It was all done so quickly that no one realized what had taken place.

Commission Men Are Indicted.

DO YOUR EYES PAIN?

when you are wearing your glasses? Many cases of headache and nervous troubles are the direct cause of your eyes. It may be that you are wearing the wrong lens, or it may be the cause of a poorly fitting frame. Frame fitting together with the fitting of the proper lenses is very essential in the fitting of glasses. If you have any ill effects when wearing your glasses do not hesitate to call and consult a refractician who has made the examining of eyes and fitting of glasses a life study. THE INDIAN PATRIOT

The old motto of the western plainsmen, of the construction period, that no Indian was a good Indian but a dead Indian, is recalled by the death of Geronimo, the aged Apache chieftain. For years Geronimo was the scourge of the southwestern plains. Pursued by American and Mexican troops he handled his little command of Indians as would a Napoleon or an Alexander. In the fastnesses of his canyon he defied capture and walked forth on raids that left a wake of burned homes and mutilated corpses in his path.

He has been termed "the worst Indian" of the west. This from the standpoint of the white man. From the Indian point of view he was a hero and a patriot. He was the last of the great red chiefs to make any important stand against the United States and the two years of fighting and marching that it took to finally capture him cost a million dollars. Chieftain of a tribe of the fiercest of plains Indians, the Apaches, they followed the doctrine of extermination of all their enemies with relentless cruelty.

To them treachery was merely another word for superior cleverness. It was not till 1882, when he was 52 years of age, that Geronimo assumed the full leadership which he continued for four years, in which he was able to deal so much destruction to the whites before he was finally imprisoned. The number of Arizona settlers for whose slaughter he was held responsible was 425. His deeds of fiendish cruelty were innumerable.

It was near Fort Apache in Arizona late in 1883, that Gen. Crook after a long chase took him and his followers prisoners of war and secured the chief's solemn promise never to resume the warfare. In the spring of 1885 the promise was ignored and Geronimo and his men were dealing death and striking terror far and wide.

Crook's efforts to recapture him proving ineffective, Gen. Nelson A. Miles was ordered to undertake the task, which he did, assisted by two men whose names have since "resounded far"—Capt. W. H. Lawson and Assistant Surgeon Leonard Wood. After trailing the wily Indian 2000 miles Gen. Miles captured him at Shoshone's Canyon, near the Mexican border, in August, 1886.

For ten years the prisoners were kept in Florida. Then Geronimo was transferred to Fort Sill, Indian Territory, where he professed conversion to Christianity and joined the Methodist church. In 1908 he made a trip to Washington in order to beg President Roosevelt for his liberty, but was unsuccessful. There are those who believe that in spite of his religion old Geronimo died with hatred of the white man in his heart.

With Geronimo's death is removed the last great chieftain. Sitting Bull and his Sioux braves were but an incident in western history compared to the long struggle of the southwest with the Apache braves. Sitting Bull and his warriors slaughtered Custer and his soldiers, hemming them in between increasing foes, but Geronimo was like an old Scotch chieftain who struck his blow and disappeared into the impenetrable fastnesses of his mountain home.

Despite his bloody career one can not but help admire the genius of this untutored savage. Born to murder, enduring hardships that others would not under, this warrior and his followers for years outgeneraled the best of the officers of the American army and escaped capture and detection. His mark has been left in the history of the west and his name will long be remembered as one of the most terrible in American history.

THAT INVESTIGATION

Disquiet for the primary law, its requirements and its influence, is rapidly becoming apparent throughout the state. If the sentiments in the press are to be believed, The Evening Wisconsin aptly sizes up the situation at Madison in the following paragraph:

"Other candidates have followed Senator Stephenson with testimony which indicates that two of them spent several thousands more than their early statements disclosed. This was due to the tardy presentation of accounts by scattered workers after they had filed their statements, and the portion of the public which stops to think about its significance will regard it as a justification of Senator Stephenson's course in taking the full time allowed by the law, instead of rushing in a statement immediately after the primary, merely because the latter course was urged as the proper one by his political enemies.

"In all the testimony which has so far appeared there is nothing indicating that anyone supposes there is any limit to the amount of money that can be expended in a contest for nomination under the primary election law. Neither has anything appeared which convicts Senator Stephenson of having expended his money for improper purposes, or for any purpose different from those for which expenditures were made by the other candidates who were his rivals.

"The primary election law is not likely to be any better liked at the end of the investigation than it was at the beginning. The people who advised its enactment as the final reform which would insure ideal government and remove all the evils of politics, could hardly secure diplomas on the strength of that prophecy if they were to present applications for them at the present time."

DOWN AT WASHINGTON

La Follette and Senator Pearson clashed horns in the halls of the Senate yesterday and Pearson said some things that would not be considered Senatorial courtesy if he had stopped to consider. The idea of his remarking that La Follette's arguments "might better be made by a vendor of a patent medicine" from the tail-door of a cart in a village of Wisconsin than from a Senator of the United States. Just think of that. Just read it over carefully and see how it really sounds. Certainly Mr. Pearson must have been mighty mad.

Chicago has another mystery which the police call a "frame-up" and the public is in doubt concerning it. A young woman tells one story and the evidence, according to the police, is contrary. Someone is wrong and the law is the one to find out which.

If California can only wait until that canal is built we can put the Atlantic fleet in the Pacific ocean and the Pacific fleet in the Atlantic ocean at any time we want to.

If it will not seriously inconvenience them Wisconsin would like to have the adjacent states keep their tubercular cattle at home.

Maybe nobody was responsible for the fire at the Chicago crib in which many workmen were killed, but they were killed just the same.

Why should Germany object to this rush of farmers to the cities after having created itself a world power in factory products?

Deep interest is being demonstrated in local politics this spring. If the number of aspiring statesmen is any criterion.

When anyone asks the reasons for polar expeditions it is a cliché he does not read the magazines.

The United States Senate has demonstrated that it is not a heaven-born power board of naval strategy.

Which style of canal would you really construct if you had your own way—Sea level or Lock?

Now that the nights are getting shorter the gas bills should follow this lead.

Roosevelt is still walking the quarter deck of congress with a firm tread.

T. C. DAWSON, NEWLY APPOINTED MINISTER TO COLUMBIA, AND HIS WIFE, MR. AND MRS. DAWSON LEFT FOR THE SOUTH AMERICAN PORT LAST WEEK. MANY ELABORATE DINNERS AND SOCIAL FUNCTIONS WERE GIVEN IN THEIR HONOR BEFORE THEY LEFT FOR THE SOUTH.

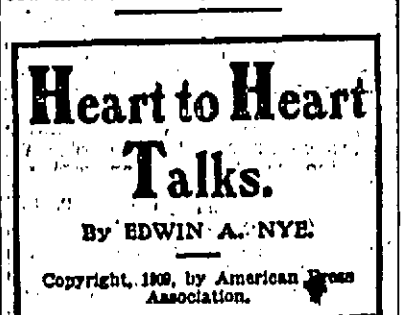

Thomas Cleland Dawson, who represents this country at Bogota, Colombia, is well known in diplomatic circles. He holds from Council Bluffs, Ia. He is in the prime of life and due for diplomatic advancement. He is a lawyer by profession, having graduated from the Cincinnati Law school. In 1906 he married in London, England, Luliza Guerra Dubal of Port Alegre, Brazil.

Mr. Dawson has made a life study of South America and its relation to the United States and is the author of a book entitled "South American Republics," which he published five years ago. Before he decided upon the profession of law he was a country newspaper man and was later city editor of the Iowa Daily Register at Des Moines. He was successful in politics and was made assistant attorney general of Iowa. His first diplomatic service was to Brazil in 1897-1904. Five times he was charged in the affairs of the legation. Later he was minister to San Domingo. After his sojourn in San Domingo he returned to the United States to become chairman of the Republican campaign committee of Iowa and during the 1900 campaign was in charge of the bureau at Chicago headquarters of the Republican national committee. Two years ago Mr. Dawson returned to South America as minister plenipotentiary to Colombia. He is a man of great diplomatic ability, possesses a charming personality and has an intimate knowledge of South American conditions such as is possessed by but few men in the diplomatic service.

MR. TAFT'S DECISION.
If it is true, as stated on good authority, that President Eliot Taft has made a decision never to drink alcoholic liquor, he is to be warmly commended.

Mr. Taft has the will power of a strong man, and if he has made up his mind he will keep his pledge.

One naturally asks the reason for such a determination.

There is perhaps small danger for such a man in the occasional use of intoxicants. His strong personality would not permit such a weakness to become a vicious habit.

But Mr. Taft's exalted position among men makes his personal example a matter of great importance. And, above all—

The spirit of his action in this decision is the spirit of self denial for the sake of others.

And that kind of spirit in a great man is more potent than a thousand thousand commands. The latter is the spirit of the law; the former is the helpful spirit of the gospel. One is of Sinai, the other of Calvary.

When a strong man gives up what may be to him a pleasure, moved by a love of his fellow men, the world takes note of it.

President Eliot of Harvard says: "I turn my back on all the past if need be. I have changed my views. I have hundreds of young men on my hands. No license for the city of Harvard which covers the heads of those students."

Not for himself, but for his students, that is the Christlike doctrine.

Fred Grant, the son of the silent soldier and himself a brave man, when the cup is offered him says, "I am afraid to drink."

When some one asked Grant why he was afraid to drink he replied, "I am afraid not for myself, but for the young officers."

That is it.

Phillips Brooks, one of the greatest preachers of modern times, understood the meaning of this spirit of sacrifice for others. In the presence of young men who looked to him for leadership he spoke the language of the little converted Jew of the first century: "If eating meat causes my brother to offend I will eat no more meat while the world stands."

It is refreshing to note the growth of this brotherhood kindness, the spirit of sacrifice on the part of the strong, for the benefit of the weak.

The law of the survival of the fittest is cruel; the law of helpfulness for the weak is divine.

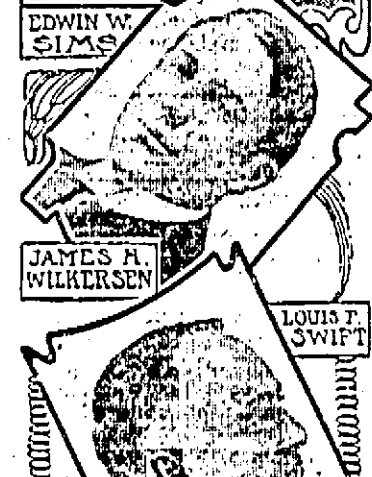

Posthumous Names in China. Another Imperial decree has been issued on the subject of posthumous names to their late majesties the empress-dowager and the emperor.

How Lorella Was Interested. While the visitor told how he had ridden 20 thrilling miles on the cow-catcher of a locomotive, five-year-old Lorella listened attentively. As he concluded, she asked: "Did you catch the cow, Mr. Black?"

Jimmy's Grievances. After Jimmy had attended school a few days he begged to stay at home. "Because," said he, "teacher says we mustn't talk and I'm so tired of whispering!"

PRINCIPALS IN THE INVESTIGATION OF THE ALLEGED DEEP TRUST.

Chicago, Ill.—The so-called beef trust of Chicago, including Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Cudahy Packing company, Union Stock Yards & Transit company, Morris & Co., National Packing company and others, is to receive the most rigid inquiry into its methods of business ever set on foot. District Attorney Sims, and his chief assistant, James H. Wilkerson, have had much experience in trust investigation and have entered this with a determination to ferret out the details of the alleged combination to the fullest extent.

Last week the two attorneys journeyed to Washington to confer with Attorney General Bonaparte relative to starting steps which they anticipated taking. It is thought they were fearful they were treading on treacherous ground and wished the authority of the national government to go ahead.

They have just returned to Chicago with the full sanction of the federal authorities and are now taking up the investigation before the grand jury.

The investigation has proceeded so quietly and unexpectedly that it has attracted little attention, although it is of the greatest importance. The grand jury, which was convened some time ago, desired the presence of several witnesses, and they secured outside witnesses, even the witnesses themselves were aware of the nature of the investigation.

J. Ogden Armour is the head of Armour & Co. and Louis F. Swift is the president of Swift & Co. Both of these firms figure prominently in the investigation.

The National Packing company will form one of the principal elements of the extended investigation in the belief that it is a holding company for the others in the trust, and that through it they transact the monopolistic affairs.

Each corporation also will be looked into individually. Subpoenas have been served on heads of departments at Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Cudahy Packing company and Union Stock

Morris & Co. will continue to bear the brunt of the investigation, as the government firmly believes it has specific evidence of rebate violations against Morris as well as its share of any trust that may be proven.

Reasonable. Two Irishmen one day went shooting. A large flock of pigeons came flying over their heads. Pat elevated his piece and, firing, brought one of them to the ground. MRS. CRONIN LIES NEAR DEATH'S DOOR

Widow of Murdered Man Broken Down Physically by Severe Strain of Her Trouble.

At her home on North Bluff street, Mrs. Michael Cronin lies dangerously ill with little hope of recovery. The trouble and sorrow caused by the brutal murder of her husband were a great burden for her and she was unable to bear the physical strain and has been ailing for the past two weeks. On Wednesday her condition was quite serious and her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Persons, was summoned from Beloit. On Wednesday night she came so ill it was thought that she would not live until morning, and Mrs. Wm. Persons was called and administered the rites of the church. Typhoid injections brought her through safely and her condition has somewhat improved, but another attack will cause her death. Today she was reported to be resting quite easily, but spent a restless night. The incidents following the murder keep recurring in her mind and as she is about seventy-six years of age has caused her to break down physically. Mrs. Cronin still retains her faculties but talks only of the death of her husband.

BRIEF LOCAL NEWS.

Fainted From Over-Exertion: A young woman who was hurrying toward the St. Paul depot with a satchel, fainted from over-exertion while passing the brick building & Illinois lumber yard on High street yesterday afternoon. Over-exertion happened to be in the vicinity and went to her assistance. She quickly regained consciousness and a sleigh from a nearby livery stable was pressed into service to convey her to the train. Her destination was Milton Junction, but her name could not be learned.

Busy Days for Street Force: Sanding slippery sidewalks and cleaning away ice and snow one day, and opening up clogged gutters for running water less than 24 hours thereafter, lend unpleasant variety to the work of Street Commissioner James Senneker and his force this extremely variable winter. East Milwaukee street from Division to Main is giving the greatest amount of trouble during the melting spells.

D. A. R. Invited: The Jansville Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution has been invited to attend services at the Carroll Memorial M. E. church Sunday morning at half past ten o'clock.

Birthday Commemorated: George Washington's birthday was commemorated in the high school and all the grammar schools of the city today by fitting exercises. No entertainments were especially held for students composed of others than the pupils themselves, although visitors are at all times welcome.

Twenty Days for Flynn: John Flynn, who had just completed a term of fifteen days in the county jail for drunkenness, was again haled into municipal court this morning to answer to a similar charge. He pleaded guilty and was sent back to that institution for twenty days. Mr. Flynn was sent to jail for four days.

Salvation Army Special: Tonight at the Salvation Army hall, No. 2 East Milwaukee street, at eight o'clock, Major G. T. Jordan, "the man of God," from Milwaukee, will publicly enroll a number of new soldiers under the army colors. Everybody is invited to this meeting. As this is the major's last night in these shores of meetings, none can afford to miss seeing and hearing him.

To the Voters.
Roy Cummings, who has announced himself as candidate for the office of city clerk on the republican ticket at the primaries to be held on March 23, has lived all his life in Jansville. Until he was injured about four years ago he was the employ of his father, D. S. Cummings, painter and paper-hanging contractor. Since that time he has been ticket seller at the West Side rink. Being handicapped by the injury to his leg, Mr. Cummings is unable to make a complete personal canvass of the voters as he wishes and therefore takes this means of giving his past record.

DR. H. G. NIERMAN SACRIFICES LIFE FOR MEDICAL EXPERIMENT.

Dr. H. G. Nierman of Fort Wayne, Ind., made a martyr of himself in order that he might successfully demonstrate that by cutting out over five feet of the lower bowel in the human body, the shortest route to perfect health could be obtained. Surgeons the world over agree that our digestive organs need to be brought up-to-date. In short, the lower or big part of the bowel was designed to meet the requirements of our savage state, when our food was of uncertain state, coarse and consisting largely of waste material. Operations for the removal of the appendix are of common occurrence, but never has an attempt been made to remove the lower bowel, the real breeding place of all the poisonous germs. Embodiment surgeons at the National Tuberculosis congress in Washington where the theory was first propounded by Dr. Nierman, looked askance, but so firm was he in his belief that the operation could be successfully performed that he decided to have it performed on himself.

Lying on the operating table at St. Joseph's hospital in Fort Wayne, Ind., and after he had given minute instructions to the group of surgeons who were to make the incision and into the small intestine on the left side with the descending colon (large intestine) at the point where they come most closely in contact, Dr. Nierman underwent the first operation of the kind known in the history of surgery.

Remarkably enough, world-wide attention was attracted when it was announced that the operation was a success, and it was everywhere conceded that a new epoch in surgery had been begun. Well on the road to recovery, Dr. Nierman was being showered with congratulations, but at this juncture peritonitis set in and death took place shortly afterward. However, he had demonstrated his theory and surgeons agree that operations of a like nature will be as common as those for appendicitis before long.

MRS. T. W. NUZUM HOSTESS THIS NOON

Seventy-five Ladies Enjoyed Her Hospitality—Special Program Rendered

Mrs. T. W. Nuzum entertained a company of seventy-five ladies in her residence on Milwaukee avenue this afternoon, when a program of exceptional interest took place, two young women from Chicago having been engaged to brighten the little affair by a reading and a group of musical numbers that followed the one o'clock luncheon.

Miss Elizabeth Woodberry gave the reading: Browning's "In a Balcony"; and Miss Jessie Green, the quality of whose soprano is big with future, brought youth to the songs here named:

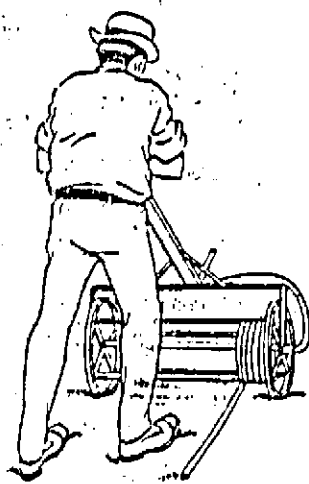

"When Daisies Pled and Violets Blue" (The Violet), Arno "Das Weichen" (The Violet), Mozart "Spring Poem" (The Violet), Nevin "Autumn" (The Violet), Whittier "The Starling" (The Violet), Brahms "Wagtail" (The Violet), Brahms "Ganz im Helmen" (The Violet), Cussen "Secret" (The Violet).

Miss Green intoned with a delicate cadence the old English ballad which was composed by Arno to Shakespeare's words, and her renditions were altogether commendable. This evening she will return to Chicago, there to resume her studies under the tutelage of Miss Lila A. Bred.

IMPROVED HOSE REEL

Convenient Apparatus for Manipulating the Garden Hose.

The excellently constructed reel for garden hose shown in the illustration below is the recent invention of an Oregon man. At first, long lengths of garden hose are exceedingly troublesome to handle, but with the assistance of this apparatus the problem becomes easy. It is not necessary to unravel all the hose before the supply of water can be turned on. The end carrying the nozzle is always free to operate, the water flowing unimpeded through the unrolled hose encircling the reel. Moving the apparatus backward or forward lengthens or shortens the line of hose and does not interfere with the flow of the water. In addition, a spiral in the axle to regulate the flow of the water. The axle is hollow, the water traveling through the hose into the axle and out of one end of the axle into the short length of hose terminating in the nozzle.

STAND FOR THE BIRD CAGE

A New Piece of Household Furniture.

A singing canary bird is considered an essential feature of many homes so that the new invention in the shape of a cage stand will be regarded as a welcome piece of household impedimenta by many. The new stand is six feet two inches high and has ornamental wrought brass legs, forming a tripod with a spread of 20 inches, making it steady and unlikely to be upset by accident. The balance of the stand is made of brass tubing. A feature especially emphasized by the manufacturer is the fact that the stand may be entirely taken down for shipment, thus effecting a great saving in transportation charges.

NEW STAND FOR BIRD CAGE.

Is Very Busy: Game Warden Peter Drafaul is keeping close watch upon all illegal fishers at Lake Koshkonong and on the Rock river. He reports that he has found many illegal net lines on the river and also on Lake Koshkonong, and has destroyed as many as a thousand hooks since he began his crusade some weeks ago. There has been considerable fishing through the ice at Koshkonong and on some portions of the river, which Mr. Drafaul thinks he can break up.

Cases Dismissed: In municipal court today the action of the State vs. Leroy Elphick for shooting a cat was dismissed at the request of the complaining witness. The action of the State vs. Humphrey was also dismissed for lack of evidence that any crime had been committed. District Attorney J. L. Fisher and Atty. J. E. Gottle of Edgerton appeared in both cases.

A Remarkable Eczema Cure

NO MORE HOPELESS CASES OF THIS DREADED DISEASE.

Eczema has long been one of the most dreaded of diseases, not only for the suffering and humiliation it entails, but also because of the difficulty hitherto found in curing it. Doctors have failed, and the desperate patients have resorted to much-advertised "so called" remedies, only to meet with disappointment. Now all this is changed.

A sure and speedy cure for eczema—absolutely unfailing, as thousands are ready to testify—has at last been found. Dr. Taylor's Eczema Remedy has established itself solely on its merits as an infallible blood purifier and skin cleanser. Its use has enormously increased within a brief period, as its efficacy has been proved.

For not alone is this remedy effective in the worst case of eczema, but it is probably the quickest and surest remover of all skin blemishes, such as pimples, black heads, acne, herpes, rash, barbed itch, etc., that has ever been discovered. Often one application, over night, clears the complexion.

A free descriptive booklet is loaned by the Dr. Taylor Remedy Co., Philadelphia, and the remedy and booklet can be obtained at The Smith Drug Co. and at all first-class druggists.

3000 Homes in Italy to be Covered With LYTHOID ROOFING

Bought by the U. S. Government for the Benefit of the Earthquake Sufferers

Read the article clipped from the Journal of American Lumbermen:

"The Turnbull-Jones Lumber Company, wholesale of yellow pine lumber, with offices in the First National Bank building, Chicago, has received a contract from the United States government to furnish the material for 3,000 homes, to be delivered in Italy, for the benefit of the earthquake sufferers. The company will furnish all materials, such as shingles, laths, glass and other incidentals. The work will be shipped in knockdown condition via New Orleans. The total amount of material to be used is as follows: 14,000,000 feet of yellow pine, 1,782,000 square feet of Lythoid roofing, 6000 doors, 21,000 windows and 655,000 pounds of nails. Each house will be approximately 10x20 feet in size and will contain two doors and seven windows, floored with yellow pine. On the 15th of this month the government sent via New York expert carpenters and a supply of tools and nails, in response to the request for the material, which will be shortly on hand."

Why Did the U. S. Government Select Lythoid Roofing For That Hot Climate?

Because it tested it and found it to be the best piece of goods made.

When you need roofing do as Uncle Sam did. Buy LYTHOID ROOFING. It is the best and we can prove it.

Up to about the year 1860 the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky was widely advertised by its owner. But the owner died that year and left the cave to thirteen heirs scattered over the country. The lucky thirteen devoted themselves to dreams of spending the big income which the cave had been earning for many years because it had been advertised. But they forgot to keep up the advertising.

Now the cave is visited by comparatively few persons instead of by many thousands annually, as in the days when it was advertised.

But the great Cave conveys a lesson.

If you are not advertising your place, telling of the bargains you offer, of the new goods you receive, of the quality of the goods, of the styles; if you are not constantly suggesting in some manner or other that your store is a good place to buy or that your goods are desirable, your store will be ignored even more than the Mammoth Cave is ignored, because you are not even a Natural Curiosity. AND BESIDES, the public is beginning to realize that the progressive merchant is the advertiser, because naturally if he has nothing to advertise he doesn't advertise. Don't let the public get the idea that you have nothing to advertise. Keep a reminder in the paper. Do something to call attention to your store. Start to spread a little information about your goods and your store and your methods. You have confidence in your goods or you would not have bought them. Now tell the public what makes you have confidence in them. The public does not know. Do not let your store be a "Mammoth Cave" unadvertised. And remember, the public does not drop its beliefs in a minute—you have got to knock them down by proof.

Home Course In Modern Agriculture

IX.—Weeds and How to Combat Them

By C. V. GREGORY,
Agricultural Division, Iowa State College
Copyright, 1900, by American Press Association

In attempting to produce large crops the farmer finds that he has many enemies working against him. Among the worst of these are weeds. One of the greatest problems that confront the farmer is that of keeping his crops free from these pests. After a field has been sown and prepared that a large amount of plant food is available, with plenty of moisture to dissolve it, it is poor policy to allow weeds to seize this food and moisture and convert them into a worthless product.

Weeds may be divided into three general classes—annuals, biennials and perennials. Annual weeds are those that grow entirely by seeds and live but one year. An exception to this is found in the winter annuals, which come up in the fall, live through the winter as small plants and produce seed the following spring.

Among the most troublesome annual weeds are the foxtails. These are grasslike plants that are too common to need any special description. The fact that makes them so difficult to combat is their great seed-producing capacity. It is not difficult to kill one foxtail plant, but no sooner is that done than another springs up to take its place.

Early fall plowing gets rid of many of these weeds by turning them under before the seed is ripe. Some of the seed which is ripe will grow up, and the plants will be killed by the first frosts of winter. If the field is harrowed early in the spring many of the remaining seed can be induced to start. The more weeds that come up at this time the better, since they will be killed in the subsequent preparation of the land for planting.

There is no better implement for killing weeds before corn comes up than the harrow. Harrowing is a cheap operation, since so many acres can be gone over in a day. The more times a cornfield can be gone over with the harrow before the corn comes up the better. In harrowing to kill weeds care should be taken not to do the work when the weather is cloudy or the ground too wet, or the weeds will be transplanted rather than killed.

In regard to the value of harrowing growing corn opinions differ greatly. It is almost impossible, however, to harrow corn without destroying some of it. It is a waste of time to test the seed and planter with the idea of getting a good stand and then harrow part of it out. Unless the weeds are very bad the harrow had better be put away in the machine shed as soon as the corn begins to appear above the surface of the ground.

Thorough cultivation from the time the corn is two or three inches high until it is ready to "lay by" will do much to keep the weeds in check. The deep early cultivations will bring up the seeds that have been lying dormant at the bottom of the furrow since. These will germinate and be killed by the later cultivations. Foxtail may grow up and go to seed after the crop gets too large to cultivate. It is often a good plan to sow ripe corn at the last cultivation. This will come up quickly and shade the ground so completely that it will prevent the growth of annual weeds almost entirely.

Annual weeds seldom do much damage in small grain. If the grain is drilled in on a properly prepared seed bed it will get such a start that most of the weeds will be smothered out and die for lack of plant food and light. One annual that is sometimes troublesome in grainfields is mustard. Since this weed is easily killed by cultivation it seldom goes to seed in cornfields. Consequently when small grain follows corn there is little mustard seed in the soil except that which is sown with the oats.

There is another annual, or rather winter annual, that is much harder to eradicate than those mentioned so far. This is squillgrass, so called because of its fuzzy heads. The seeds are very light and are attached to long beards, which cause them to be carried for considerable distances by the wind.

Squillgrass is not troublesome in cultivated fields, but often infests meadows and pastures to such an extent as to make them almost worthless. Moving as soon as the heads appear will not kill the plant, but if kept up throughout the season will prevent it from producing seed. In bad cases the only remedy is to plow up the field and put it in to some cultivated crop. Where a regular rotation which includes the meadow and pasture, etc., followed, this weed can be readily kept in check. A point that must be carefully attended to in preventing the spread of this as well as of any other weed is to keep the roadsides and fence corners from raising weed seed enough each year to keep the entire farm seeded.

Another troublesome annual in some sections of the country is the Russian thistle, a form of tumbleweed. By rolling across the fields after it ripens it scatters its numerous seeds very widely. These weeds are usually not so plentiful but that they can be easily destroyed by pulling before they form seed. If doing this they may be kept from becoming thick enough to do any serious damage.

Biennial weeds live through the first winter and produce seed the second year of their life. They die as soon as the seed is ripe. The common bull and prairie thistle and burdock are conspicuous examples of this class of weeds. Biennials are not difficult to subdue. In cultivated fields they seldom live long enough to produce seed. They seed so late that they hardly ever ripen seed in meadows. In permanent pastures they may be controlled by cutting off below the surface of the ground just at the beginning of blossoming time. Sheep and goats will rid a pasture of these and all other troublesome weeds.

The hardest class of weeds to combat are the perennials. These do not depend entirely upon seed production to spread themselves, but are propagated by means of underground stems. These stems extend along beneath the surface of the ground, sending up stalks at short distances. They live in the soil from year to year, sending up fresh shoots every spring.

Some of the most common and troublesome perennials are the Canada thistle, morning glory, wild artichoke, milkweed and quack grass. These weeds are found on all parts of the farm—in cultivated fields, in small grain and in meadows and pastures. The only way to kill them is to destroy the roots or starve them by preventing leaf growth. This is much more easily said than done. Where the weeds occur only in small patches the desired result may be accomplished by covering them with a thick layer of straw. In a dry season thorough cultivation will discourage them, though it will seldom exterminate them entirely. When the ground is wet cultivation will do more to spread perennial weeds than to kill them. Two pieces of the underground stems which stick to the shovels will grow wherever they happen to fall and thus start a new center of trouble.

Of all the means of getting rid of perennial weeds that have been tried none is so effective as turning the field into a hog pasture. If the fields are fenced hog tight and the rotation includes the hog pasture the hogs will get a chance at all parts of the farm every four years or so. They are very fond of the roots and stems of perennial weeds, especially those of quack grass and morning glory, and they will continue to root until the last piece is brought to light and eaten. Where all the fields are not fenced hog tight a temporary pen may be used. This can be moved about over the patches of quack grass and morning glory until they are destroyed.

The weed problem is not nearly so difficult as many people believe. The remedy for weeds is good farming, and when good farming becomes the rule weeds will largely disappear. In a way weeds are more of a benefit than an injury. If it were not for them we would often be tempted to let the cornfield go a few days longer before cultivating and thus fail to get as large a crop as we might otherwise have done. It is the cultivation that the presence of the weeds forces upon us that makes plant food available and prevents the escape of capillary moisture and so enables the plants to put their best efforts into producing a maximum yield.

Action of the Magnetic Needle.
The magnetic needle comes to rest pointing north and south because the earth acts as if it were a great magnet. A compass needle would come to rest pointing lengthwise of a bar magnet placed under the compass needle, just as it does under the influence of the earth. For this reason we think of the earth as a great magnet. The north pole and the north star have no influence over the compass needle.

On the last afternoon before the departure Hugh asked for the clothes he had worn when he was brought to the hospital, found the gold pieces he had snatched in the burning chapel and tied them in a handkerchief about his neck. They would suffice to lay his own passage. The one red counter he had kept—it was from henceforth to be a reminder of the good resolutions he had made so long ago—he slipped into a pocket of the clothes he was to wear away, a suit of loose, comfortable tweed.

Waiting restlessly for the hour of his going, Hugh asked for the newspapers. Since the first he had had them read to him each day, listening fearfully for the hue and cry. But today the surgeon put his request aside.

"After you are there," he said, "if Bishop Lindow will let you. Not now. You are almost out of my clutches, and I must tyrannize while I can."

A quick look passed from him to his assistant as he spoke, for the newspapers that afternoon had worn startling headlines. The world affairs of a mining town across the ranges had little interest for him, but the names of Stiles and Moreau on the clicking who had waked it, thus late to the sensation. The professional caution of the tinker of human bodies wished, however, that no excitement should be added to the unavoidable fatigue of his patient's departure.

This fatigue was near to spoiling defeat after all, for the exertion brought again the dreadful stabbing pain, and this time it carried Hugh into a region where feeling ceased, consciousness passed and from which he struggled back finally to find the surgeon bending anxiously over him.

"I don't like that shivering spell," the latter concluded to his assistant an hour later as they stood looking through the window after the receding carriage. "It was too pronounced. Yet he has complained of no pain. He will be in good hands at any rate." He tapped the glass busily with his forefinger. "It's curious," he said after a pause, "I always liked Sanderson—in the pulpit. Somehow he doesn't appeal to me at close range."

The special car which the bishop had ready had been made a pleasant interior. Fern boxes were in the corners, a engaged currier swung in a bracket, and a softly cushioned couch had been prepared for the sick man. A moment before the start, as it was being coupled to the rear of the resting train, while the bishop chatted with the conductor, a flattered messenger boy handed him a telegram. It read:

I arrive Anahim tomorrow. Confidential. Must see you. Urgent.

The bishop read it in some perplexity. It was the first word he had received from her since her marriage; but, aware of Hugh's forgery and disgrace, he had not wondered at this. The newspaper today pictured a still worse shame for her in the position of the man who in the name still was her husband, who had tried so swiftly the downward path from thievery to the worst of crimes. Could Jessica's coming have to do with that? He must see her, yet his departure could not now be delayed. He consulted with the conductor, and the latter pointed over his tablets.

As a result his answering message flashed along the wires to Jessica's faraway train:

Sanderson injured. Taking him to court train at two Twin Peaks 2 tomorrow afternoon.

And thus the fateful moment approached when the great appeal should be made.

The evidence of the first day's trial of the case of the people against Hugh Stiles was the all engrossing topic that night in Smoky Mountain. Harry McGinnis perhaps aptly expressed the consensus of opinion when he said, "I allow we all know he's guilty, but nobody believes it."

Late as Smoky Mountain sat up that night, however, it was on hand next morning, rank and file, when the court convened.

All the previous evening, save for a short visit to the cell of his client, Feltner had remained shut in his office, thinking of the morrow. In his talk with Harry he had not concealed his deep anxiety, but to his questions there was no more answer. "I don't blame you, Brent," he said, "for you don't know him as I do. I have seen much of him lately, been often with him, watched him under stress, for he doesn't deceive himself; he has no thought of acquittal. We none of us knew Hugh Stiles. We put him down for a shallow, vulgar blacking, without redeeming qualities. But the man we are trying is a gentleman, a refined and cultivated man of taste and feeling. I have learned his true character during these days."

"Well," said the other, "if you believe in him, so much the better. You'll make the better speech for it. Tell me one thing. Where was Miss Holmes?"

"I don't know."

The lawyer shook his head. "I don't blame you, Brent," he said, "for you don't know him as I do. I have seen much of him lately, been often with him, watched him under stress, for he doesn't deceive himself; he has no thought of acquittal. We none of us knew Hugh Stiles. innocence; that his refusal to answer her entreaties had been the last straw to the load under which it had gone down; that she believed him indeed the murderer of Moreau. To seem the crying criminal, the pitiful liar and actor in her eyes. The thought stung him. Her faith had meant so much.

The outburst, feeling weighed heavily on Feltner when he rose to continue the testimony for the prisoner, so rudely disturbed the evening before. In such a community potting was of no avail. Throwing expert dust in jurors' eyes would be worse than useless. In his opening words he made no attempt to conceal the weakness of the defense, evidently considered. Stripped of all husk, his was to be an appeal to Caesar.

Through a cloud of witnesses conclusively, consistently, yet with a winning tactfulness that disarmed the objections of the prosecution, he began to lead them through the series of events that had followed the arrival of the self-forgotten man. Out of the months of their own neighbors—Dewlin, Barney McGinnis, Mrs. Halloran, who came down weeping—they were made to see as in a cyclorama the struggle for rehabilitation against hatred and suspicion, the courage that had dared for a child's life, the honesty of purpose that showed in self-surrender. The prisoner, he said, had recovered his memory before the accusation and asserted his absolute innocence. Those who believed him guilty of the murder of Dr. Moreau must believe him also a vulgar liar and poseur. He left the inference clear: If the prisoner had dared that cowardly shot he knew it now; if he lied now he had lied all along; and the later life he had lived at Smoky Mountain, eloquent of fair dealing, straightforwardness of purpose, kindness and courage, had been but hypocrisy, the bootless artifice of a shallow buffoon.

The session was prolonged past the noon hour, and when Feltner rested his case it seemed that all that was possible had been said. He had done his utmost. He had drawn from the people of Smoky Mountain a dramatic story and had filled in its outlines with color, force and feeling. And yet as he closed the lawyer felt a sick sense of failure.

Court adjourned for an hour, and in the interim Feltner remained in a little room in the building, whither Dr. Brent was to send him sandwiches and coffee from the hotel.

"You made a fine effort, Tom," the latter said as they stood for a moment in the emptying courtroom. "You're doing wonders with no case, and the town ought to send you to congress on the strength of it. I declare, some of your evidence made me feel as mean as a dog about the case, though I know all the time he was as guilty as the devil."

The lawyer shook his head. "I don't blame you, Brent," he said, "for you don't know him as I do. I have seen much of him lately, been often with him, watched him under stress, for he doesn't deceive himself; he has no thought of acquittal. We none of us knew Hugh Stiles. RIDE 1,500 MILES TO ATTEND COLLEGE.
MRS. MARY E. WELLMAN AND HER DAUGHTER MARGUERITE AND THEIR FAITHFUL COLLIE, "FLOSSIE."

Fayetteville, Ark.—Mrs. Mary E. Wellman and her daughter have not yet completed a ride on horseback which makes the 90-mile ride required of the army officers look small in comparison. They rode alone from El Paso, Texas, to Fayetteville, Ark., a distance of 1,500 miles, and undertook the hard journey for the sake of education. The daughter is now in college and doing well. Mrs. Wellman tells the experience of her trip in the following graphic words:

"Sincerely, and a desire to keep our horses, which to us are members of the family, compelled us to undertake the ride. Our collie dog, Flossie, came with us. Climate and educational advantages attracted us to Fayetteville, Ark. My daughter Marguerite has been a rider for six years and is just 16. Almost daily, in Mexico, her rides were from eight to 12 miles, but I was no rider and avoided learning, so I had reason to dread the undertaking, especially at 53 years of age."

"Our first day's ride was 30 miles and from that on, except in deep sand and until our horses got sick in North Texas, we rode from 20 to 30 miles a day."

"When we left El Paso, Texas, on horseback we had $100. At El Paso, Texas, we received money from a consignment, and after horse-dressing and other
